VINCI Energies launches Axians, its new global brand dedicated to ICT

VINCI Energies has combined its ICT (information and communication technology) businesses into the new Axians brand, making it a global leader in this market.

The new Axians brand brings together VINCI Energies' international networks specializing in ICT solutions and services, including Graniou, dedicated to telecoms infrastructures, and Imtech ICT, a recent major acquisition by the Group. Operating in 15 countries and employing 7,000 people, the new Axians business generates annual revenues of €1.6 billion, equivalent to over 15% of VINCI Energies' total revenues.

"In today's increasingly connected and collaborative world, ICT solutions are vital for all areas of human and business activity," says Patrick Lebrun, Deputy Managing Director of VINCI Energies and Chairman of the Axians brand. "They cover all sectors where VINCI Energies deploys its solutions and is seeking to innovate, including energy, industry, transportation, buildings and smart cities. Our ambition with Axians is to become a recognized leader in the ICT market."

Axians supports its customers — private sector companies, public entities, operators and service providers — throughout the entire lifecycle of their ICT projects, from design concept to operations and from infrastructure to application solutions, tailored to their specific requirements and delivered on-site or in the Cloud. Axians offers a comprehensive range of solutions to help its customers achieve their goals and improve their performance.

"With this new brand, VINCI Energies is positioned in a global market with strong growth prospects, particularly in segments like Big Data, mobility and the Cloud, working in close synergy with the Group's other brands and business activities," says Jean-Yves Le Fèvre, Axians Brand Director.
